Blades on the Move

Moving massive wind turbine blades can be a feat in and of itself, but what if the job requires the massive blades to go through the middle of town and then up a steep mountain? Sounds like a job for Mountain Wind's Transportation Team! Mountain's expertise and equipment make these type of jobs possible and safe. With our FTV 550 blade movers and an army of drivers, spotters and pilot cars, the team is able to re-position each blade to the specific circumstances and are able to prevent excess removal of the surrounding canopy. It's the perfect combination of technology and teamwork!

Haulin' Heavy!

Pulling this 30k lb communications tower up the mountain with rugged 8-10% grades and narrow switchbacks took extra planning and a safety conscious crew. After the safe delivery to the site it was handed off to our crane operator and 9000 E crane to set it successfully in place.

Safety Strong, Safety Share

Constructive criticism is often viewed as a negative part of communication that simply highlights ones' mistakes or flaws. The positive side of this invaluable communication is that it helps the individual(s) grow in a positive direction which benefits the company and the employee. Try to be open to constructive criticism and use it to be the best asset that you can be.

Terrell Davis, Field Safety Manager

The core of Mountain is a top notch crew who is committed to SAFETY and executing every job with professionalism and precision. We are proud to be Mountain strong.
